ON THE COVER

Pictured on the front cover is the statue honoring slain K-9 officer Rocco which is part of the police memorial located at the corner of North Shore Drive and Art Rooney Way, near Heinz Field in Pittsburgh, PA.

Rocco was a Pittsburgh Police Department K-9 who was killed in the line of duty in January 2014 while apprehending a convicted sex offender who was wanted in connection with a violent home invasion.

Rocco's death led to the passage of "Rocco's Law" which changed the crime of killing a police dog from a third-degree felony to a second-degree felony.

...AND NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

Is the grass really that much greener?

Ramesh Nyberg

The other day, I was on the Web site of my old department to look up someone's name and I found myself looking around the site and how it was presented to the public. I decided to share my thoughts with you, my fellow brothers and sisters in blue (and brown – we wore brown uniforms and nicknamed them “the brown gown”).

Let me begin by telling you that I worked for the Miami-Dade Police Department for 24 years, from September of 1982 to November 2006. Prior to going to MDPD, I worked for three years at two small municipalities in uniform patrol. During my career at the MDPD, I worked in patrol; I did some time as an FTO; I worked on a plainclothes “Crime Suppression” team; and, from 1985 on, I worked in Homicide. Like most police officers, I bitched and moaned about things, commiserated with my colleagues about how crappy this policy or that policy was, criticized the department for doing something or failing to do something. We cops are good at that, aren't we? I wouldn't go as far as saying we bite the hand that feeds us; rather, we tend to blow off steam by griping about our surroundings. I was no different. In fact, my rantings and satirical criticisms about silly things our bureaucracy did were the very fuel for what ended up becoming this column you are reading. That's right: Our union newspaper, Heat, featured a column written by yours truly with the same “And Nothing but the Truth” title every month.

The column was popular which led me to believe that most everyone felt the same way about the topics I wrote about. To this day, retired guys I run into say, “Always loved that column you wrote.”

But, I write today not to toot my own horn. In fact, I'm here to humbly tell you that I often blared it a bit too loudly. I've been gone from the job for 13 years now and I have had many occasions to “look back” at things. I'll tell you this: Not only did we have it pretty damned good at the MDPD, but the department itself, for all of its shortcomings, stood out among departments its size for its professionalism and its record for staying out of the news. What I'm telling you is that, if I have anything to write about the MDPD today, it's likely going to be praise rather than criticism.

Consider this: By the time I retired, our sworn personnel count was somewhere around 3,400. Add another 4,000 or so civilian support personnel to that and that's a pretty good-sized organization. At one point, we were the largest police agency in the southeastern US. I'm guessing our sworn roster is close to 4,000 by now, so we might still carry that title – I don't know. With that many officers, in arguably one of the highest crime regions in the country, the MDPD did an exemplary job of avoiding bad press.

One of the things I used to grumble about was the amount of training we went through. Good grief, I would lament, taking us off the road again for this certification, for stuff we hear every year? Truth be told, the Miami-Dade Police Department has a low count of scandal, bad police shootings and other media black eyes. Oh, we didn't escape it completely. We had more than our share of turmoil in the late '70s/early '80s with brutality and corruption, but, since that time, I think the department has done an outstanding job of keeping its collective nose clean. Could the training be a part of that? I would have to say “QSL” (our radio Q-code for “affirmative”).

While perusing the Web site, I noticed that the pay scale for the police officer position has gone up. A new recruit is paid $43,000 while in the nine month academy, then starts at a probationary salary of $53,554 once he (or she) graduates and trades his (or her) blue recruit uniform for the brown gown. Pay steps can take a career officer to a maximum of $95,321. One of the very smart things the department has done is raise the minimum hire age. For decades, you only had to be 19 years old with a high school diploma to be a police officer. I always thought that was asking for trouble. Now, you have to be 20 when you apply and 21 at the time of hire. Additionally, here are the hiring requirements:

- A high school degree and a two year (AA) degree or 60 college credits, or
- Two years of active military duty, or
- Three years of continuous post-high school work experience, or
- One full year of law enforcement experience.

Some life experience is a good thing. That is the kind of requirement which can lower the potential for bad decisions or panic occurring in high stress situations. It can also increase among the ranks the level of maturity an officer presents when dealing with the public in general. That ability to communicate and deal with citizens can go a long way in reflecting the departmental image.

The rest of the requirements are pretty standard: No felony convictions or misdemeanor convictions involving honesty (perjury, etc.); complete the physical abilities test; pass the drug test; and so on.

I always check the local papers for things happening with the MDPD and, when I see a scandal or a cop doing something stupid, getting arrested, or some other embarrassing incident, it is way more often that he (or she) is employed by another department. We have 35 other police departments in this county alone and they are all smaller than the MDPD, yet they all seem to cause more trouble and create more mistrust in the public eye than my old gang at Miami-Dade. This is a community of close to three million people, a wild mix of cultures and immigrants and a legacy of crime and corruption, so keeping the department out of the negative spotlight is a pretty impressive task.

No, I wasn't recently hired as a publicist for the department (but, maybe I should look into that...). And, no, this isn't a favor for anyone on the job. Hell, I hardly know any of them anymore. This is just an old brown-gownner looking back and realizing that, for all of the complaining I did, I'm grateful for the opportunity the department gave me. If I would have stayed with those small departments, I have no idea if I would have ever had the chance to work in Homicide or work different areas of the county.

I'm proud of my police department. I feel lucky to be able to say this because not everyone can. If you are truly unhappy and miserable, then by all means get out – it's better that way for you, your fellow officers and the public. But, if you just find yourself griping and grumbling too much about where you work, take a moment – before you switch departments or pull the pin – and take inventory about what you have and what others might not. You might surprise yourself. P&SN

NOCHASE Spike System

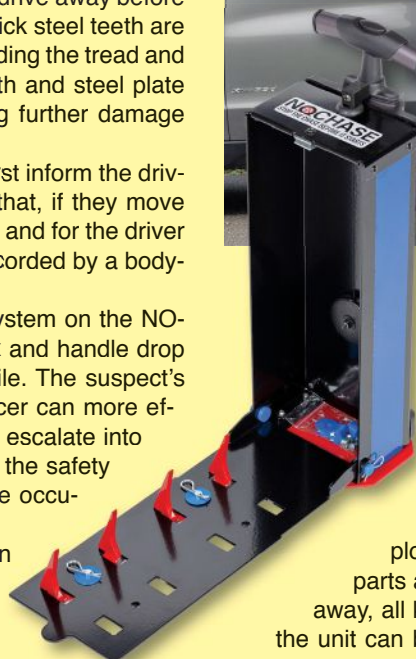

NOCHASE, LLC has released its new tool for law enforcement, the NOCHASE Spike System. It is a proactive, durable, handheld deterrent for use in routine stops and tactical ops to literally "Stop the Chase BEFORE It Starts™."

At a routine traffic stop, the officer approaches the vehicle; deploys the NOCHASE with a downward hand-thrust motion, placing it in front of the rear tire; and then continues on with the traffic stop. If the driver tries to drive away before being signaled by the officer, the ¼ inch thick steel teeth are imbedded in the tire, puncturing and shredding the tread and sidewall. As the rear wheel turns, the teeth and steel plate are forced up into the wheel well causing further damage and limiting drivability.

It is common practice for the officer to first inform the driver that a device has been deployed and that, if they move their vehicle, it will cause extreme damage and for the driver to acknowledge it; preferably, all of this recorded by a body-worn camera.

The proprietary breakaway hinge pin system on the NOCHASE device ensures that the main box and handle drop to the ground without becoming a projectile. The suspect's ability to drive off is hindered and the officer can more effectively control the situation before it can escalate into a high-speed chase. This helps to ensure the safety of the officer, the community and even the occupant(s) of the stopped vehicle.

The tactical version is ideal for use in drug raids or other high intensity situations where multiple vehicles may be around a suspected building. Officers preemptively deploy the NOCHASE units next to the vehicles and then the team proceeds with the raid. Any suspects attempting to flee the scene can be quickly detained as their vehicles have been effectively disabled.

The compact NOCHASE device weighs approximately eight pounds; can be deployed on either the driver's or passenger's side; and can be deployed thousands of times, at every stop. If parts are damaged though an attempted drive-away, all key components are replaceable, so that the unit can be quickly returned to service. Visit their Web site at nochase.net.

Available on Amazon Books Store

Newly available on Amazon books, Harlem Raiders is a hard-hitting, crime-fighting saga about a diverse narcotics team working in Harlem's 32nd Precinct during the notorious 1970s and '80s. Based on a true story, NYPD Sergeant Peter Pranzo leads his narc team (nicknamed the "Harlem Raiders") in one of New York City's most notorious neighborhoods, ultimately achieving over 8000 gun and narcotics arrests during a seven year period. Working closely with a local female community leader, Pranzo and his team form an unlikely, yet highly effective, union. Over time, all persons involved are shadowed by a rogue, undercover federal agent who uses her skills to covertly protect them as they work together to defeat a trio of Mafioso families which have flooded their Harlem community with heroin.

During Lieutenant Pete Pranzo's 21 year career with the NYPD, he was involved in two separate shootouts and achieved over 60 department awards, including the Combat Cross and the Medal of Valor.

How to Reduce Repeat Encounters

Responding to repeat encounters is a challenge for law enforcement agencies. Individuals who come into frequent contact with law enforcement officers or nonemergency services often have unmet behavioral health, housing or other social services needs. A brief fact sheet, sponsored by the Bureau of Justice Assistance, outlines four practical steps to help officers address the needs of high utilizers and to reduce their contact with the criminal justice system over time.

New Video: "How Law Enforcement Culture Plays Into Stress and Wellness"

In the "Research for the Real World" video from the NIJ, the speakers discuss how law enforcement culture plays into stress and wellness. They argue that a culture of not showing weakness may deter some officers from getting much needed help, especially if they are suffering from mental health issues. The experts in the video recommend acknowledging that it is acceptable and normal to have an emotional response to the intensity of issues most officers experience in the line of duty.

New High-performance Duty Holster

The Rapid Force Duty Holster by Alien Gear Holsters has been designed to exceed law enforcement standards in durability, speed, security, and ergonomic usability. Incorporating extensive feedback from numerous police personnel, this new duty holster addresses all of the shortcomings of other holsters currently being utilized.

The Rapid Force has been designed for an intuitive draw stroke, utilizing gross motor control with as few movements as possible. The result is a reliably smooth and consistent draw.

This high-performance holster strikes the perfect balance between retention levels and ease of use. While easy to operate, it is almost impossible for culprits to perform a gun grab while its retention devices are engaged.

The Rapid Force is configurable as a Level II or Level III retention holster with a thumb release, trigger guard pressure release, and an optional back strap and RMR sight cover attachments. Adjustable passive retention is also standard to ensure continuous firearms safety.

Reflex Sight for LE

The compact Sightmark Mini Shot M-Spec Reflex Sight is the perfect optic for LE applications on shotguns, pistols and ARs. The kit includes a low profile mount for shotguns and pistols, along with a riser mount for AR platform rifles. It is 100% waterproof; extremely low power consumption provides 300-30,000 hours of battery life on one CR1632 battery; a 12 hour auto shutoff prevents the unit from running out of batteries; and it has an ambidextrous digital switch for both right- and left-handed shooters. Windage and elevation click adjustments make zeroing the 3 MOA red dot reticle easy and ten brightness levels give shooters perfect reticle options from low light situations to the brightest days.

Foldable Ballistic Shield

ATCS has recently introduced the Swift Shield. The patented design is based on origami principles which enable it to collapse down to the size of a notebook for storage. When needed, the Swift Shield instantly unfolds to provide six square feet of lightweight NIJ Level IIIA ballistic protection.

Its foldable nature makes it possible to store in an officer's car door, in between the front seats or in a backpack. It can be deployed on a windshield or folded in half on top of the trunk or hood of an officer's vehicle.

Finally... One Multipurpose Device

Technology is changing our world at an astonishing fast pace, and you can find a selection of devices for any need that you have. But what makes one stand out from the rest: applications, ease of operation, system compatibility, price point?

Laser Technology, Inc. (LTI) partners with law enforcement agencies to create a safer world; by engineering smart measurement devices that enhance user safety in high-risk fields.

Harnessing the power of LTI devices, you have equipment that works with you and for you. The LTI 20/20 TruVISION™ lidar traffic enforcement device allows you to enforce what you see in real-time, from a safe vantage point: unrestrained occupants, misuse of HOV lanes, following too close, speeding, distance between cars, aggressive and distracted driving.

LTI's 20/20 lidar product series line captures indisputable evidence for any enforcement initiative. With the TruVISION's easy setup, simple operation, fast target acquisition, and indisputable evidence, you can spend more time focusing on serving your community with confidence.

WHAT'S HOT FROM SHOT?

NEW GUNS FOR 2020

Mike Boyle

The 29th Annual Roundup Covering New Firearms of Most Interest to Law Enforcement

The SHOT Show might be best described as the world's largest firearms exposition, and manufacturers large and small use this event to introduce their newest products and services. As in recent years, the SHOT Show was held in the Sands Convention Center located in Las Vegas, Nevada, and this year it drew over 55,000 attendees. With over 2,000 manufacturers on hand, it is impossible to see it all.

My focus remains on firearms and related products of interest to the law enforcement professional and taking all that in remains a daunting task. In addition to the extensive display of merchandise, the SHOT Show also offers a number of valuable seminars which address trends in law enforcement. I had the good fortune of being a presenter at one of the seminars and it was encouraging to see a roomful of officers taking the time to learn something new and network with their peers.

Many of the new firearms I was able to check out this year might be best categorized as evolutionary, rather than revolutionary. Most of the major players were offering next level versions of their already proven designs. The red dot revolution is in full swing and just about every popular service pistol is now available with a provision for mounting a red dot optic. This trend includes smaller pistols used for concealed carry. Let's take a look and check out some of the new offerings.

Beretta USA Corp. (beretta.com)

Although striker fired, polymer frame pistols dominate the law enforcement scene, some departments and officers still prefer a traditional double-action design. This year Beretta has launched the 92X series, the latest evolution of this modern classic.

There is simply no getting around the fact that the Beretta 92, in its original configuration, is a big gun. Trigger reach and grip circumference can be problematic for anything less than a large, male hand. The new 92X effectively resolves that issue by utilizing the thinner Vertec grip which is better suited to smaller hands. The gripping surface itself is more aggressive and grip angle definitely enhances "pointability."

Combat sights are standard and the front sight is dovetailed at the slide to simplify fitting of an aftermarket unit. The universal slide can be configured for FS mode (decocker/manual safety) or G mode (decocker only) operation. Models with a three slot Picatinny rail for the fitting of tactical lights or lasers are available within the 92X line.

To my thinking, the pick of the litter is the 92X Centurion. This pistol splits the difference between the full-size 92X and the 92X Compact, and it sports a slightly shorter barrel and slide mated to a full-size frame.

Beretta's highly successful line of APX striker fired pistols continues to grow and now includes full-size, mid-size and compact variants. APX pistols are available in 9mm and .40 S&W and there is something in the mix to please just about everyone. This line of pistols features a serialized, removable chassis which can be switched off to other replaceable grip frame housings.

Colt's Manufacturing Co., LLC (colt.com)

A few years back, Colt took us by surprise and began introducing revolvers bearing the name of their old "snake" series. No, these guns aren't the same as

The Beretta 92X features a Vertec frame which is slimmer and offers a different grip angle.

WHAT'S HOT FROM SHOT? New Guns for 2020

what came before which riles many purists. But, the bottom line is that there is still a niche for snub revolvers in the law enforcement universe and Colt is turning out some very nice examples.

Last year, Colt introduced the six shot King Cobra, chambered for the .357 Magnum. The King Cobra Target sports a 4¼ inch barrel, adjusting rear sight, fiber-optic front, and custom wood medallion grips. Colt did, in fact, market a .357 Magnum revolver called the King Cobra back in the 1980s, but, rest assured, this is an entirely different gun. There is no question in my mind that this is the better gun.

The big buzz at Colt, however, is the reintroduction of the Colt Python .357 Magnum revolver. Back in the day, the Python was widely regarded as the Cadillac of revolvers and was universally held in high regard. The new copy is rendered in stainless steel and is every bit as good as the original. Copies with both four and six inch barrels will be available. I harbor no illusion that Pythons will again be appearing in police duty holsters, but it's great to see that it's back.

FN® America, LLC (fnamerica.com)

Some of the world's most battle proven firearms are turned out by FN Herstal, S.A. Their American subsidiary, FN America, LLC, manufactures a wide range of handguns and rifles well-suited for law enforcement.

A few years back, the FN 509® line of striker fired pistols was introduced and it quickly distinguished itself in a crowded field. New this year is the FN 509 Compact MRD which features a 3.7 inch barrel and a slightly abbreviated grip frame to make it better suited for concealed carry. This 9mm pistol ships with a 12 round magazine and a 15 round magazine (where legal) and a pair of ten round magazines in more restrictive jurisdictions. What sets it apart from other compact pistols is the patented FN Low Profile Mounting System which accepts nearly all commercially available miniature red dot optics. Blackout sights to cowitness the optic are standard.

Also for 2020, FN is offering a pair of carbines, dubbed the FN 15® SRP G2, which are ideally tailored to the law enforcement mission, including a variant with an 11.5 inch barrel and another with a 16 inch barrel. These lightweight carbines feature an extended handguard with top rail space and multiple M-LOK and quick detach points. Low profile sights and a chrome lined button-broached barrel with a 1:7 inch twist are standard in these 5.56 mm caliber carbines.

The new FN 15® SRP G2 carbine in the 11" barrel configuration weighs only 5.6 pounds (with an empty magazine).

GLOCK®, Inc. (us.glock.com)

GLOCK remains the big dog in the law enforcement handgun market and they continue to burn the midnight oil to keep up with demand. The big news from GLOCK wasn't a new service or concealed carry pistol, but another product many of us have longed for.

The new GLOCK 44 in .22 LR is the firm's rimfire pistol and may not be something you would ordinarily associate with law enforcement. But, I beg to differ! Externally, the GLOCK 44 is the same size as the ever popular GLOCK 19. It's put together a little bit differently, but it features the same safe action trigger and fits in the same holsters as the GLOCK 19. Two huge advantages I see are low cost practice and its use as a training aid for recoil sensitive shooters. There is no doubt in my mind that GLOCK has hit a home run.

The first thing you notice when picking up the GLOCK 44 is its ultralight weight. With an empty magazine in place, it tips the scales at a scant 14.64 ounces. This weight savings is realized by using a polymer slide which rides on a steel chassis. The careful eye will note the breech face hole is offset to accommodate the rimfire .22 LR cartridge. The standard capacity magazine holds ten rounds.

The day before the SHOT Show, I traveled to the Las Vegas Metro Police Range and took a turn with the G44. It is, indeed, most impressive. Throughout the day, two sample G44s digested 5,000 rounds of .22 CR without incident. That speaks very well for this design.

Heckler & Koch (hk-usa.com)

Heckler & Koch is synonymous with innovation. Over the last 60 years, this firm has brought a number of groundbreaking designs to the market, including the MP5 SMG; the P7 family; and the world's first polymer frame pistol, the VP70.

A few years ago, HK introduced the VP9 9mm pistol. The VP9 was a late entrant to the polymer frame, striker fired sweepstakes, but, unlike some of their competitors, HK got it right the first time around. Since its launch, the line has grown to include a variant in .40 S&W, as well as subcompact copies better suited for discreet carry. For 2020, the VP9 has been given a number of upgrades to make it even better.

For starters, all VP9 pistols will now be shipped with 17 round magazines. The new magazines are no longer than the original 15 round models, yet provide two additional rounds. A new sight configuration includes a high visibility front sight along with a clean back serrated rear. The big news is that all VP9 pistols will be manufactured with an optics ready slide cut with a cap.

Kimber Mfg., Inc. (kimberamerica.com)

The Kimber EVO was introduced last year and has played to rave reviews. No larger than an old school .380 ACP, the EVO is chambered for the 9mm and packs a much more powerful punch. It also deviates from the pack of polymer pistols in that it is comprised of an aluminum alloy frame and stainless steel slide. The trigger action is relatively short and features a clean break. Three dot white sights are standard.

This year, two new variants are offered. I took a fancy to the EVO SP Select finished in business-like FNC matte black. Users who prefer a brighter gun should check out the EVO SP Select finished in KimPro Silver II. Both of these EVO pistols represent a significant savings over other offerings in the EVO line, but incorporate the same key features as their more refined cousins.

They say you can't reinvent the wheel, but Kimber did that just a few years ago with their line of K6s™ revolvers. Kimber was able to design a small frame, six shot .357 Magnum revolver unlike anything that came before. The original K6s revolvers were double-action only, but, recently, the next evolution with both double- and single-action capability was introduced. The K6s DASA revolvers have external hammers and the line includes a two inch snub, a three inch variant, a four inch Combat model, and a four inch Target model with adjustable sights. The four inch copies will not draw much attention from law enforcement, but the snub variant would be an excellent choice for backup or off duty carry. This stainless steel hideout is indeed different, but it is head and shoulders above anything else in its class.

O.F. Mossberg & Sons (mossberg.com)

Last year, Mossberg® shocked the world with the introduction of the MC1sc, the firm's first handgun in 100 years. This little micro-nine exceeded all expectations and remains in heavy demand. So, what do you do for a follow-up act? How about making it bigger!

The new Mossberg MC2sc is a compact handgun which embodies many of the features of the MC1sc, but with twice the ballistic payload. At just a tad over seven inches in length with an unloaded weight of 21 ounces, the MC2sc is designed with concealed carry in mind. It ships with a 13 round flush mounted magazine, plus a 15 round extended magazine. Five different models with different safety, finish and sight options are currently being offered. Sometime prior to the SHOT Show, the all-new 940 JM PRO Competition Autoloading shotgun was introduced. The 940 incorporates any number of upgrades over the tried-and-true 930 autoloader, including an improved gas system and an adjustable length of pull stock. I was wondering if a tactical version of the 940 was in the cards and I've been led to believe that it is. I know I'll be saving my lunch money!

Ruger® (ruger.com)

You can pretty much count on something new from Ruger on a regular basis, but I was quite surprised with the latest entry into the market.

The new Ruger-57™ is a service-size pistol chambered for the 5.7 x 28mm cartridge. Performance of this cartridge round splits the difference between handgun and rifle rounds and it was originally designed for use in the FN P90 PDW. In the shorter barrel of a pistol, the muzzle velocity is dialed back quite a bit and will probably be in the 1600-1700 fps range. The bullet weights range from 28-40 grains and energy is roughly on par with a .22 Magnum rimfire rifle. Certain rounds, specifically FN's black tip, will defeat soft body armor.

The new Ruger-57™ utilizes the high velocity 5.7 x 28mm cartridge.

Now that we understand the rounds' capabilities, let's take a look at the gun. The Ruger-57 is built on top of a high performance glass-filled nylon frame which is mated to an alloy steel slide given a black oxide finish. The barrel length is 4.94 inches with an overall length of 8.65 inches. Although it's a good size pistol, it tips the scales at a mere 24.5 ounces and the magazine capacity is 20 rounds.

I don't see the Ruger-57 as a duty gun, but rather a niche handgun for special teams. As indicated earlier, rounds which can defeat body armor a subject might be wearing are available. Sure, you can do it with a rifle, but the Ruger-57 might just be the ticket when operating in confined space. Recoil of the 5.7 x 28mm cartridge is nonexistent and makes for quick follow-up shots.

are in wide use by a number of law enforcement agencies. Leading the charge is the firm's P320 striker fired pistol and a number of new variants introduced for 2020.

Make no mistake about it: Red dot optics on pistols are the next big thing in law enforcement weapons and SIG is off to a running start. New this year are the RXP XFull-Size and RXP XCompact complete with a ROMEO 1 PRO reflex sight mounted on the slide. The XSeries pistols might be best described as an upgraded version of the P320 complete with an undercut trigger guard and an extended beavertail for better fit and comfort. The ambidextrous slide catch has also been extended and these XSeries pistols also feature a flat trigger for a clean 90 degree break. The new RXP copies also feature suppressor height XRAY3-dot Day/Night sights to cowitness the optic. A cover for the optic plate is also included if the end user chooses to run the gun without the ROMEO sight.

In a few short years, the SIG SAUER P365 has become one of the most popular pistols on the market. With its unique magazine, SIG engineers were able to design a trim, subcompact pistol which can hold 11 rounds without the blocky feel of some of the competition. Based on its runaway success, it should hardly surprise that a number of variants are now available.

First up for consideration is the P325XL with a slightly larger grip frame, barrel and slide. The magazine capacity is bumped to 12 rounds, but this downsized blaster is still very easy to conceal. Best of all, it has a big gun feel and its great trigger action and XRAY3 sights make hitting a snap. Taking it one step further, SIG is also offering the P365XL ROMEO ZERO with a 3MOA optic installed and ready to go.

Yet another new entry is the P365SAS. This new variant sports the SIG Anti-Snag (SAS) treatment to assist a smooth, fumble-free draw and faster target engagement. Its most unique feature is the flush mounted FT Bullseye Fiber Tritium night sight. Highly visible in bright light or dark conditions, this low profile, rear mounted unit is less likely to hang up on clothing during the draw stroke, especially since there is no front sight. The takedown lever and slide catch are flattened to reduce snag potential. A ported barrel and slide to reduce muzzle flip complete the SAS package.

The M&P9 SHIELD™EZ® enables shooters to easily chamber the first round.

Smith & Wesson® (smith-wesson.com)

The big news from Smith & Wesson is the introduction of the M&P9 SHIELD™ EZ®. The highly successful SHIELD has yielded all sorts of variants and this latest version is destined to be a crowd pleaser. The new M&P9 SHIELD is the next evolution of the earlier .380 ACP version. External dimensions mirror the .380 copy, but the 9mm pistol is a few ounces heavier to help tame the more powerful cartridge. The EZ label implies that it's easier to rack the slide. That is indeed true and racking the slide requires about 30% less effort than the standard SHIELD. Loading the magazine is also considerably easier than other single stack pistols. The M&P SHIELD EZ also features a grip safety, ambidextrous thumb safety, three dot sights, and a light crisp trigger. Options include no thumb safety and a Crimson Trace® Red Laser-guard® aiming device.

Also new to the line are the 9mm and .40 S&W M&P M2.0™ subcompacts with 3.6 inch barrels. These pistols are ideal for plainclothes or off-duty carry and the S&W 2.0 series boast any number of upgrades over the original M&P series, especially when it comes to trigger action. An advantage of the subcompact pistols is the fact that they will also take the higher capacity magazines of the service-size pistols.

Springfield Armory® (springfield-armory.com)

The Springfield Armory XD® pistol was introduced 20 years ago and the original platform continues to be refined. Over the years, a number of spinoffs within the Springfield Armory line can trace their genesis to the XD and the new XD-M® Elite Series is the best to come down the pike.

On examining the XD-M Elite, one will note larger slide serrations for more positive manipulation, an ambidextrous slide stop and an ambidextrous magazine release. A removable magazine well to expedite fast, positive reloads is also part of the package. Depending on the model selected, the end user can select from a fiber-optic front with a U-notch rear, adjustable sights, or suppressor height sights to use in conjunction with an optic. When chambered for the worldwide standard 9mm, the XD-M Elite pistol boasts larger than normal magazine capacities and contains up to 22 rounds.

The big advantage I see with this line of new pistols is the META (Match Enhanced Trigger Assembly) trigger. Many polymer frame pistols have a subpar trigger action, but the META is indeed special. A flat face and integral overtravel stop further enhance its appeal.

The XD-M Elite line offers service-size pistols, pistols suited for concealed carry and also models optimized for tactical ops. All of the popular law enforcement chamberings are available – including 9mm, .40 S&W, .45 ACP, and 10mm.

A few months ago, Springfield Armory introduced the Hellcat™, a polymer frame micro-compact optimized for concealed carry. This striker fired micro-compact comes with both an 11 and a 13 shot magazine, offering the highest capacity for pistols in this class. Some nice frills include top slide serrations for a positive grip during manipulation, adaptive grip texture, accessory rail for the mounting of a laser or white light, and a great set of sights.

An optics ready version of the Hellcat is also available. A small micro red dot such as JP Enterprises' JPoint™ or the Shield RMsC can be mounted to bring out the last bit of potential from this slick little hideout pistol.

Walther Arms
(waltherarms.com)

Walther pistols have begun to capture the interest of agencies and individual officers for a lot of good reasons. They are indeed the anomaly in a crowded field of polymer frame pistols, in that their flagship PPQ line offers a great trigger action right out of the box. I also find the PPQ to be a little more accommodating for shooters with smaller hands.

While examining the various Walther pistols at the SHOT Show, I came across the Q4 Steel Frame. Externally, it looks exactly like the PPQ and boosts the same great trigger action, but it weighs more than a pound more! Quite frankly, the polymer pistols have us all spoiled and I don't see much of a future for the Q4 Steel Frame as an everyday duty pistol. It may just be the ticket for special ops where that extra heft will tame even the stoutest 9mm load and diminish muzzle flip.

Walther also displayed a .380 ACP variant of their CCP (Concealed Carry Pistol). The CCP M2 in .380 ACP uses Softcoil gas technology for operation to yield a very low recoil impulse. Racking the slide takes very little effort. An external thumb safety, aggressive slide serrations and a reversible magazine release complete the package. The CCP M2 is also available in 9mm. P&SN

Shooting the New 9mm Hellcat™ Micro-compact

TODD FLETCHER

In modern history, “Hellcat” has been one of the names used for some of the baddest and most powerful machines ever developed.

From the Grumman F6F Hellcat Navy fighter in WWII to the Dodge® Hellcat Challenger and Charger muscle cars, the Hellcat name means power and capability. Springfield Armory® might be onto something here.

The Hellcat™ micro-compact pistol takes the concept of an everyday concealed carry pistol with small size and weight and adds a duty caliber chambering and duty-sized capacity. If you're in the market for a new concealed carry pistol which allows you to carry a full defensive duty load in a concealed carry size, then the Hellcat is one you need to check out.

If you haven't entered the arena of micro red dot sights on pistols yet, you're in for a treat. The Springfield Armory Hellcat is available in the Optical Sight Pistol (OSP®) configuration which is only $30 more than the standard iron sight version. For law enforcement, if you haven't considered a micro red dot on a service or concealed carry pistol yet, you're falling behind. Pistols equipped with optics are no longer in the distant future. They are here and ready for everyday carry and duty use. As a result, I requested the OSP version to test and evaluate.

The Basics

Let's get through the elementary stuff first. The Hellcat is a polymer framed, striker-fired, micro-compact pistol. It takes a full load of 11+1 with a flush-fit magazine and an impressive 13+1 load with the extended magazine. This makes it the highest capacity micro-compact 9mm pistol available. It's also one which you can comfortably carry all day due to its small size and light weight. This pistol weighs a scant 18 ounces (unloaded) and is only one inch thick at its widest point.

Upon pulling the Hellcat OSP out of the box, I was impressed with the ergonomics of this pistol for concealed carry. It has a high beavertail on the backstrap to protect the shooter's hand and the trigger guard is dramatically undercut near the frame. Both of these details promote a high grip which gets the center of the bore as high as possible to the shooter's primary hand, reducing movement during recoil and allowing fast recovery back on target between shots.

The grip texture is very well done. It feels natural and provides a solid placement in the hand. It's not too rough and it's not too smooth. It's just right. Springfield even put texturing on the forward portion of the frame, giving the operator an index point for their support hand thumb and trigger finger. The shape of the frame and grip are comfortable, especially with the 13 round extended magazine in place. Combined with the superb grip texture, it stays anchored in your hand while shooting.

The Hellcat has a reversible magazine release for those of you whose arms are on backwards; however, the slide release lever is not ambidextrous. The magazine and slide release levers are on the small side (like all other micro-compact pistols) which allow a low profile for concealment carry. There is also a short section of rail on the dust-cover to accommodate a light or laser.

Shown on the far left are the first out-of-the-box shots from the Hellcat™ OSP®, as compared to other pistols in the same class which have long been broken in.

Trigger

Before my trip to the range, I tested it on my trigger pull gauge. The trigger was uniform and broke at a consistent six pounds, eight ounces of pressure. I measured the trigger again after about 500 rounds and it settled into a comfortable six pounds, four ounces. It utilizes a center trigger safety lever; however, the trigger has a flat profile, making it feel crisper than the trigger gauge would lead you to believe. The reset is very definitive, so those of you who like a tactile and audible positive reset will really appreciate this point. Is it the best trigger on a micro-compact everyday carry pistol? If not, it's pretty close.

The Hellcat is not a downsized XD® pistol. This little guy looks and feels different than the XD and XD-M® series of pistols. For one, the grip safety on the backstrap is gone. Thank you, Springfield Armory! I have experience with the XD and XD-M pistols shooting IDPA and USPSA; however, I'm not fond of a grip safety for an everyday concealed carry pistol.

The slide of the Hellcat includes front and rear cocking serrations which offer a solid grasping surface when loading, unloading or doing press checks. These serrations are both functional and they look good. They're angled slightly forward and consist of wider cuts separated by ridges, with narrow ridges running down the middle. There's also a cutout at the rear of the barrel hood on top of the slide which serves as a loaded chamber indicator.

The Springfield Armory® Hellcat™ OSP® is very reliable. It digested every combination of bullet shape and weight which was run through it.

Sights

The pistol came equipped with an excellent set of AmeriGlo Pro-Glo sights which feature a bright green tritium and luminescent front sight paired with a white outline U-notch rear sight. These are fast to acquire and a great addition to any handgun. The OSP model includes a removable optic plate and was set up with a SHIELD RMSc Mini Red Dot Sight. This is a compact, lightweight, low profile red dot sight which cowitnesses with the AmeriGlo Pro-Glo sights. The 3 MOA optic runs on a 3V lithium CR-2032 battery which gives it a runtime of one to two hours. The optic is not included with the Hellcat OSP, but the mounting surface is set up for almost any other similar optic.

Range Results

How does it shoot, you ask? I tested it with duty ammunition, typical training ammunition, an assortment of various ammo which I had laying around, and my own competition and training reloads. This pistol is a tack driver; however, I'm not one for testing accuracy from a benchrest and measuring groups. I will say that it shot One Hole Drills back to seven yards with me at the controls. The Hellcat shot better than I could ask of it.

After warming up with the One Hole Drills, I started running this new pistol hard and fast. I figure that, if Springfield Armory is going to use the Hellcat title, then this little rocket should be capable of keeping up with the expectations of that name. Using a CrossBreed® holster and running all the drills from concealment, it responded without breaking a sweat. The ergonomics of this pistol allow it to recover from recoil quickly and consistently. I was able to achieve really good Bill Drill times with the Hellcat. They were not just good times for a small, concealed carry pistol; they were good times for a full-size duty gun. At seven yards, on the shot timer, the Bill Drill is six rounds center mass. I was able to consistently get all "A" zone hits in 1.9 seconds. My fastest time with all "A" zone hits was 1.78.

The Obligatory Comparison

I did a side-by-side comparison with the Hellcat OSP and the SIG SAUER® P365. These two micro-compact pistols have led the pack with size and ammunition capacity, so this seemed like a natural. I set up the 10 x 10 Drill and learned that I was able to run the Hellcat and the P365 to slide lock, but wasn't able to get many shots off after the ten second par time on either pistol. Reloading micro-compact pistols is more difficult and significantly slower than full-size duty pistols. The end result was that I squeezed out a higher score using the Hellcat OSP due to its greater magazine capacity. You

BUSTED!

James L. McClinton, Ph.D

Give him an “A” for self-awareness...

A homeowner in Jefferson County, Colorado, caught a man as he was trying to break into a car. The homeowner called the police, but the failed burglar had fled before they arrived. However, just minutes later, the police found the suspect a short distance away, again trying to break into a truck. The police placed him under arrest, but his story doesn't end there. After he bonded out of jail, officers were dispatched after receiving a report of an attempted vehicle break-in. When they arrived, they found the same man attempting to steal a car. As they placed him under arrest, he told the officers, “I really suck at this.” (It seemed so easy to do when he was at home playing “Grand Theft Auto.”)

This sample reveals that “urine” big trouble!... A woman in Pineville, Kentucky, who was due to visit her probation officer, knew that she would be required to submit a urine sample as one of the terms of her probation. Since she had been using Suboxone®, she knew she would fail the test and decided to take evasive action. The woman submitted urine from her dog. Not surprisingly, the sample did not pass the test. Arrested and jailed, she was charged with trafficking a controlled substance and tampering with physical evidence. (Lab results revealing she would give birth to eight puppies were then discarded.)

They're going to love that story down at the jail... When a man started banging on her door around 11:00 p.m., the woman who lives alone in Rochester, New York, was immediately suspicious. “He was outside saying, ‘Please call an ambulance,’ saying, ‘I’m sick, I’m sick,’” she said. She called police, but refused to let him in. The man broke down the door and came in anyway, which made her angry. She says she then “picked up the table and I went to work on him.” The woman hit the intruder so hard, “the table broke.” She then grabbed a bottle of shampoo and squirted it on him – “in his face, all of it, the whole thing.” She was beating him with a broom when police arrived and arrested the man, but they had to take him to the hospital before jail. Even though she’s 82 years old, she’s no pushover: She’s a bodybuilder who works out daily and says she can deadlift 225 pounds. (Don’t let the orthopedic shoes fool you.)

REAL STORIES OF GENUINE ABSURDITY

Almost as popular as “I’ve only had two beers”...

In Ohio, the Montgomery County Sheriff’s Office issued a serious warning to residents: “Prior to wearing someone else’s pants,” it stated in a Public Service Announcement posted to Facebook, “please remove all drugs, drug paraphernalia, stolen property, or any other illegal items the ‘owner’ of the pants may have left behind.” That’s because, they continued, “‘these are not my pants’ is not an affirmative defense” to avoid arrest. The announcement did add a disclaimer to the bottom stating that “this message is not intended as legal advice. Please consult an actual attorney prior to wearing someone else’s pants with drug filled pockets. Thank you.” (Similarly, you cannot have a valid prescription for heroin, LSD or methamphetamine.)

Sort of like Goodwill “Hunting”... A woman stopped at a Goodwill store in Valparaiso, Florida, to pick up a gift for a baby shower. She was excited to find a Baby Einstein bouncer seat for just $9.99 – unopened and appearing to be new. Later, at the shower in Crestview, the father-to-be opened the box and found...a Mossberg® 715T semiautomatic rifle. “You guys got me a gun!” he shouted excitedly. The gun had live ammo loaded in it, so they called the Crestview Police Department. Initially, officers let the future dad keep the weapon, but later asked to hold it as they investigated the incident. “Goodwill has the best treasures for $9.99,” the woman gushed. (How sad – somewhere there is a baby who will never know the pleasure of owning a Mossberg 715T.)

My chemistry professor only taught us how to brew beer... In Arkansas, the Clark County Sheriff’s Office says two Henderson State University professors were arrested on charges of manufacturing methamphetamine. A spokeswoman for the Arkadelphia-based school says the two professors have been on administrative leave. She added that, three days earlier, police investigated a report of a chemical odor in the campus science center. Initial testing indicated an elevated presence of benzyl chloride in a laboratory, the school said. The arrests drew comparisons to the central character in the hit TV series “Breaking Bad,” in which a high school chemistry teacher began making methamphetamine. (That’s totally methed up...)

He better call Saul... The city of Tampa, Florida, sent a local man a bill for an incident of illegal parking it says occurred seven years and three months ago, something which cannot be proven or disproven. When he questioned the alleged infraction, he says he was told “the system” went looking for unpaid parking tickets and found his. A local journalist inquired further and was told that the ticket had originally been sent to the finance company which held the man’s lease. If that’s what actually happened, the man figures, it must not have been sent to him. “I don’t really know if this is a real ticket; if I ever paid the ticket; if I ever got the ticket.” But, he paid it anyway – $40. (“Okay, okay, I’ll pay the fine... in seven years and three months.”)

News flash: Handcuff keys can be purchased at Walmart and other “fine stores”... It seems there is a problem in Portland, Oregon, where thieves like to steal bicycles. In fact, it’s such a problem there that the Portland Police Department has created a special Bike Theft Task Force. One of its officers recently parked his bike in front of the Multnomah County Courthouse and, since he had forgotten his U-Lock, he used his handcuffs to secure the bike to the rack. When he returned an hour later, he found his bike gone and the handcuffs dangling from the bike rack. The department is now asking anyone who spots a blue bike with a “Police” logo on the side to contact the police department right away. (Guess who is now on foot patrol?) P&SN
